Comment regarding the fact that 5 of the 6 alternatives in DRECP recommend siting renewable energy projects on or adjacent to the Desert Tortoise Research Natural Area:

Ruin a key wildlife conservation area in the name of "green" energy? How exactly does that seem like a good idea? Do you not get the point of the whole green energy thing? Do you not have well labeled maps to plan with? Do you not actually really care? If there is another explanation, I would love to hear it.

Thanks,
